A GUIDE TO CONSUMER RIGHTS

You are legally a consumer under the Trade Practices Act when you buy goods or services priced at not more than $15,000, or, if they cost more, are usually bought for personal, domestic or household use or consumption. You are entitled to:

- * Good Title, ie, goods are free from any person's claims you are not told about before you buy, even at auction.

- * Goods of "merchantable quality" - fit for the purposes for which they are bought as is reasonable to expect from the way they are advertised, described and priced.

- * Goods fit for the purpose specified before bought.

- * Goods in accordance with samples displayed.

- * Goods which comply with Australian legal minimum safety standards.

Service companies must use due care and skill (not spill paint all over your carpet), use materials reasonably fit for the purpose, ensure the services achieve the desired result you made known beforehand.

Companies are also obliged to ensure a reasonable supply of spare parts for goods bought for ordinary use. The manufacturer may excuse itself if it has informed you, before purchase, that parts and facilities aren't available.

If these obligations aren't met you are entitled in some cases to a refund, in others to compensation for loss or damage you suffer because of failure, from the manufacturer or its agent. The extent of your rights will depend on how soon after purchase you noticed the defect or failure and complained about it.

REFUNDS:

You are entitled to a refund for a serious failure or defect soon after purchase. If these develop over time, you are entitled to a part refund, repair or some compensation. You can accept a company's offer to repair goods, replace them or give you a credit note - the choice is yours.

You are not entitled to a refund for faults pointed out to you before purchase, or if you have caused the fault or made it worse by continuing to use the goods after you noticed it. You cannot cancel a purchase and demand a refund just because you have changed your mind.

Claims for major loss because of hidden defects are complicated and require legal advice.

"No refunds" signs in shops, ads, on dockets, receipts or in sales talks are illegal. You are entitled to a refund if you don't have Good Title, the goods have hidden defects, aren't of merchantable quality, aren't fit for the purpose or don't accord with samples.

WARRANTIES: Nothing in a warranty can interfere with the implied warranty given by the law. This is a level of protection reflecting what most reputable businesses would expect to deliver in transactions with consumers. A common, misleading and inoperative phrase is given often in written warranties. "This warranty is given in lieu of all other conditions and warranties, express or implied which might otherwise be binding on the company..."

COMPLAINTS: Problems which the manufacturer or services provider refuses to resolve should be taken to your State Consumer Affairs Department. You can also inform the Trades Practices Commission, which administers the Trade Practices Act. Small claims (under $3000) can be taken to the Consumer Claims Tribunals (CCT) in your State for a small fee.

REMEMBER:

- * There is no simple definition for terms like "due care and skill" or "merchantable quality".

- * For minor faults your rights extend to rectification, not to insisting on total replacement.

- * Legal action is expensive (except for CCTs).

- * You are obliged to minimise costs arising from a fault.

- * You are obliged to keep receipts, letters, parts orders, etc.

- * You are obliged to inspect merchandise before buying.

HAGLEY CAMP by Rachel Dawson, Grade 5

We went on a camp to learn a lot more
We played in the barn,
Hid under the straw
We went on a bus trip to Mole Hill,
Feeding animals, doing duties,
Seeing things old and still.
We played games,
Got into mischief
Had heaps of fun!
We saw many cows walking around
Some sleeping in the sun
Hagley Farm is the place to stay,
Because you are busy
All of the day.

HAGLEY by Damon Young, Grade 5

Here we go with a ho, ho, ho.
Off to Hagley where well should know.
We're going to be busy with activities up to our neck.
If it's too much work just yell, "Heck".
We're in the Marakoopa Caves with stalactites and stalagmites.
The fun is increasing I'm up so tight.
I'm in the "Olde Classroom" and in trouble.
I've a blue nose as big as a bubble.
Now let's go in the pool
After that we're back in school.

THE CASE AGAINST THE AUSTRALIA CARD

At first sight the Australia card looks like a good idea. Why then did an all-party Parliamentary committee reject it? Why has the Government had trouble getting agreement in Caucus to the Card, and why are the Liberal, National and Democrat Parties opposing it?

Those who have had a chance to study the legislation cannot help but be concerned. In the view of the Joint Select Committee on the Australia Card, the proposal does not deal with the major problems that it is intended to overcome, and will be costly and wasteful exercise. Most importantly will be the opening of the way for the greatest attack on the privacy of individuals - "Big Brother" has caught up with us at last!

The aim of the card is to reduce social security fraud, tax evasion and illegal immigration. The card will not achieve these aims, and has too many frightening implications, for example-

Government records on citizens from at least 7 departments will be numbered and then linked to one Authority. This means that private financial, medical or other records risk losing their confidentiality. None of us would wish for the details of our personal finance or matrimonial problems to be widely known.

- Over 2000 extra public servants will be needed.
- Total cost to Australian taxpayers is estimated at $1 billion over 10 years.
- Everyone, whether ill, elderly, disabled or living in the country will have to attend in person to initiate business transactions.

Yet despite the enormous opposition to the card, the Government is continuing to push for its introduction.

Existing systems can be modified to deal with the problems of fraud and tax evasion successfully, without infringing on civil liberties or incurring such enormous costs.

- The establishment of a centralised National register of births, deaths and marriages would effectively reduce the opportunity for people to use false identities.
- This would allow for more stringent identification procedures for claimants of social security

LETTER

FROM MR. MAX BURR, MEMBER FOR LYONS.

12th. November, 1986.

MS. J. Picone,
Executive Director,
CEP Secretariat,
GPO Box 9844,
HOBART...7001

Dear Ms Picone,
Thank you for your letter of Oct 28 concerning an application by the Rossarden Tourist and Progress Association for CEP funding. Your reference is TCEY 00065.

The application is for $28,560.00 with which to employ six people for sixty three weeks. I fully support this application as its acceptance will have far reaching repercussions in an isolated area of Lyons. Storeys Creek is part of the area greatly affected by the closure of the tin mine at Rossarden several years ago. Nothing has replaced that industry as far as supporting the community infrastructure that was left when the mine closed. The situation that now exists is a pocket of population experience a high level of unemployment. The project supported by the Progress Association will, if successful, help to alleviate some of the hardship of the area.

The Storeys Creek Outdoor Centre is basically a collection of buildings left by the mine owners and now run, on behalf of the State Education Department, as a centre for outdoor educational pursuits. They are used by state and private schools throughout Tasmania in a form of external studies, linked with the curricular of those schools.

The studies enjoyed by visiting students combine knowledge in the mining history of the region, botanical background and geological structure. The students also learn outdoor skills such as camping, bush walking, basic cooking and survival. The intake is from forty students at a time on a weekly roster.

The grant is required for maintenance of the buildings used by the students for accommodation, dining, recreational and study purposes. The main areas needing attention are roofing, guttering, window repairs and floor covering. There has been little maintenance since the buildings were taken over from the former owners and the Education Department has advised that no funds are available.

It would be unacceptable to find such a resource being closed down simply because it failed to come up to the standards required to house students. Its very existence is essential to the township. Its viability supports local business people and, indirectly, is responsible for the limited employment in the area at the moment. The closure of this resource would be serious for the local residents.

Yours sincerely,
Max Burr,
Member for Lyons.

- benefits, who would be required to produce births and marriage certificates and citizenship papers.
- The Taxation Office needs major structural change and new data processing equipment.

The strong opposition that is coming from all sides of political and community life must give any thinking Australian reason to reject this seductive, but dangerous option.

HOCKEY....

LETTER TO THE EDITOR....

Dear Sir,

Once again the ratepayers of Cornwall find that the Council have short changed them and wasted their money. In the Examiner dated Nov. 13th it was stated by Councillors Salter and Legge that the drainage and roadworks had been upgraded. I just wonder had the two councillors inspected the work done. When I was a schoolteacher if any of my pupils had passed up work as shoddy and rough as that done by the Council workers they would have had to stay in after school to do it properly.

All that has been done at Cornwall is a grader came up the road chopped off more of our precious bitumen - A couple of lorries came up with gravel and a couple of men threw it over the road.

Along came the wind and blew it away. Drains - don't make me laugh - One place where they had banked it up with stones then covered with gravel it wasn't too bad a job but cars and lorries have broken it away. If only they had used a little cement then sealed it - certainly it would cost money but at least it would have lasted more than a week.

One person's drainpipe was upended and left, now to come out of their house, they have to take quite a big detour.

I know we were not promised a rose garden but at least there was no need to give us the thorns.

Cornwall people are honouring the promise they gave the Council but now they feel very let down.

Una Camplin.

CONGRATULATIONS and best wishes to Mr and Mrs. Bob Singline who celebrate their 58th wedding anniversary on November 21st.

THANK YOU

THANKYOU..... I would like to thank everyone for their many kindnesses, in letters, cards, flowers etc., phone calls and personal inquiries and visits. Also for the many other kindnesses given to me. Thankyou one and all.

Mary King.

DIVISION OF ROAD SAFETY.....PEDESTRIANS AND THE DRIVER

Regardless of who is 'at fault' the killing or maiming of a pedestrian is a shocking experience. You can avoid such calamities by strictly obeying the 'give way' rules and always being on the alert for pedestrians, day or night.

- It is a fundamental responsibility of a motorist to avoid collisions with pedestrians.
- You must 'give way' to a pedestrian on a pedestrian crossing or children's crossing.
- You must approach pedestrian crossings at a speed which will enable you to stop before reaching the crossing.
- IT IS AN OFFENCE TO OVERTAKE AND PASS A VEHICLE WHICH IS SLOWING DOWN OR STOPPED AT A PEDESTRIAN CROSSING.
- You must 'give way' to pedestrians when turning left or right at an intersection.
- Watch out for and obey signals given by uniformed school crossing guards.
- It is illegal to stop or park a vehicle within 9 metres on the approach side and within 6 metres on the departure side of a pedestrian crossing.

YOU AS A PEDESTRIAN.

Too many pedestrians risk their lives by placing an unfair burden on drivers. The Pedestrian who demands a right-of-way takes an enormous risk.

As a pedestrian you must:

- Keep on available footpaths;
- keep close to the right hand edge of the road facing traffic if there is no footpath;
- whenever possible use a pedestrian crossing or a marked crossing at traffic lights;
- obey 'Walk' and 'Don't Walk' signals;
- if no pedestrian facility is available wait for a natural gap in traffic and cross by the shortest or direct route.

YOU MUST NOT:

- walk on a carriageway if a footpath is provided;
- alight from a moving vehicle;
- loiter on crossings.

MORE GRADE 3 VIEWS OF INTERNATIONAL CHILDREN'S DAY.

GO TO MASS AS A FAMILY.

I think that people who are Christians should go to mass as a family. Some mothers and fathers are too lazy to get up on Sunday morning and go to mass with their children. I think people should go to mass every Sunday.

Andrea Burgess.

LITTER.

I think that when the papers have been used they should be put in the rubbish bin, not laying on the ground.

Kylie Musicka.

BOOKS.

I think that it is bad for people to write rude books and let the people give the books to the teachers and then the teachers give the rude book to the children. The children learn about rude things instead of good things.

Kate Horsman.

DRUGS.

I think that drugs should be stopped. If people have got drugs they should be put in gaol forever. I think drugs are bad.

Scott Targett.

PEACE.

I like peace because you don't fight or do anything nasty. I don't know why people don't make this place a better world to live in.

Claire Loane.

I hate to hear Gorbachev and Reagan fighting. I hope they sit down and talk it out. It is ashame they fight. I hope they stop. It makes me sad about that fight.

Cameron Bullock

THE ARMS RACE.

I don't see why people should have arms races. I don't see any reason to have arms race in the middle of the International Year of Peace. It is supposed to be the International Year of Peace not the International Year of War!

Andrew Fearman.
