ITS A RECCED YEAR FOR CAMPERS.

It certainly is! Wherever you go in the State there are tents, caravans, people sleeping under the stars (a bit wet in some places but quite safe on the East Coast) and the roadsides are adorned with a variety of hitch-hikers. Some carry their packs bravely and some use them as pillows until the goodhearted driver offers them better comfort.

Mainland holiday-makers wishing to bring their own cars over for such a holiday have found that even though their names were on the waiting list for months to have their cars shipped no vacancies were forthcoming and quite a number of families are using hired cars to tow their hired caravans. This must amount to a pretty expensive holiday for the average family. And yet from various sources it is heard that it is not uncommon for unbooked vehicles to be shipped over at a moment's notice. Surely the shipping company could devise a better service for the Tasmanian tourists; especially when our Government is trying to boost that industry.

The very fact that an increasing number of people on holiday are choosing to camp out will help in the promotion of the State as a holiday island, for where else in Australia will you find such ideal countryside for the outdoor life? White and golden beaches. backed by rich rainforests in the South. The beautiful and unique climate of the East Coast. The rugged West with its mining towns and mighty rivers, towering mountains and tumbling streams. Even the North West Coast has retained popularity with the Tourist, despite the pollution that poisons the sea around Burnie. The people of Burnie themselves are to be congratulated for the very successful Sports Fair held recently!

Back to the old gripe! Let's face it — if Tassie was tagged on there at the bottom of that other State it would be the most densely populated area in Continent, except for Sydney

"MEDICAL AUTHORITIES WARN THAT LIGHTING BUSH-FIRES IS A HEALTH HAZARD!"

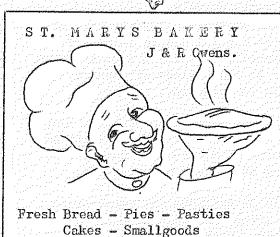

metropolitan perhaps.

Or if some engineer ahead of his time were to build a bridge over the Strait it would be busier than that other Bridge!

These may be wild ravings, so it seems is the idea of improving shipping services over those two hundred miles of water.

No doubt when our Asian neighbours have acquired the Casino, they might then turn their interests to improving our shipping services!

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Dear Editor.

How can we make Tasmanians "Aware of Their Heritage t. More and more we see evidence of destruction the large areas of burnt out countryside, dead animals on . the roadside, culvert posts upside down, green stripes on the milestones, broken glass in the swimming areas, old buildings either smashed up or bulldozed down. Do we just have to git around and wait to hear what our children have to say about the mess we have left for them. to straightem up? Which way will we be looking when we listen to them slating the sick destructionists of today? Sad Reader

Dear Sir,

I should like to congratulate the little town of Ross on the excellence of its Caravan and Camping Ground. My family and I recently stayed there overnight and were sorry not to be able to extend our stay — it was so pleasurable.

I shall never forget the sum-set reflected in the river and that marvellous old bridge silhouetted against the red sky. After this glory had subsided, we enjoyed the sight of the old Church on the hill, which is floodlit after dark. The amenities were excellent and the caretaker and his wife are most conscientious in the care of their customers.

Yours sincerely, Jack Fingleton.

Obedience and Fellowship. Tourists often tell that when they visit dangerous places where the services of a guide are required, they have a peculiar feeling unlike any other - not a feeling of companionship, fellowship, or friendship alone, but a combination of all three. This feeling, they say, is produced by their obedience to the guide's commands, and those who guide them through such places seem different to other men. Our Guide once said, "If you keep my commandments, you shall abide in my love", that is, in Him. Simple obedience, then, will produce in us a feeling of confidence in Jesus Christ that all the religious zeal and fervour in the world could not produce without obedience. Obedience is the key that unlocks the door into the dwelling of the indwelling Christ.

Getting Acquainted with God.

When Mark Twain was in Berlin, he received an invitation asking him to call upon the Kaiser. "What, "Papa;" exclaimed his little daughter, after contemplating the invitation for a moment in speechless awe, "if it keeps on this way there won't be anybody left for you to get acquainted with but God."

An amusing remark; but in saddest seriousness, how many there are who have a wide circle of acquaintances and yet have never come to know Him whom to know is life eternal.

> From the "Autobiography of Mark Twain.

Looking back to the time when you wanted to know HOW TO CLEAN A MARABOUT BOA.

Make a lather of Hudson's extract of soap and warm water; shake the marabout well about in the lather, but do not rub it or get it twisted. Continue the process until you think the boa is thoroughly cleansed, and do not let the fact that it shrinks to about one-eighth of its original proportions, and has altogether the appearance of the proverbial drowned rat, discourage you, for this is a way that marabouts have in the water. To dry. - Continue shaking in the open air, or before a fire until thoroughly dry; your boa will then look as good as when it was new; but it will not do so if you adopt the lazy unsatisfactory expedient of pegging it to the line to dry. This method has been found to act well both with the ordinary brown marabouts, and with the coloured ones.

A MECIPE FOR BLOOD MIXTURE:

Six pennyworth of native hops, 6 penny worth of red cloves, 6 pennyworth of dandelion, 6 pennyworth of Jamaica sarsaparilla, 3 pennyworth of gentain root, 3 pennyworth of liquerice root. Place the above ingredients in 7 pints of cold water, and stand for $1\frac{1}{2}$ hours simmer gently for 3 hours, leaving the lid on; strain, then add $1\frac{1}{2}$ pints of water, and boil again for 1 hour strain again, and add a small bottle of gin to make it keep.

HOUSEHOLD ECONOMIES:

Old felt hats will cut up into soles for wearing inside your shoes in winter.

A sheet of brown paper makes a warm counterpane.

Damp newspaper cleans looking-glass as well as chamois leather.

Tea-stains on china, if rubbed with a little damp salt, will quite disappear.

FISHING NEWS

The Scamander Angling Club held a successful bream contest last Sunday. For once, fish were plentiful although many were small. Trophies were won by the following anglers:- Heaviest fish caught from the bank - Jack Kellaway 21b ½oz., second, Clem Turner 11b 15 oz., third Geoffadsby. From a boat - Wes Stone, Mrs Frnach and Mrs. Reynolds. Ladies trophy - Mrs Turner and Junior Robert Mallinson.

Next contest will be held at Wrinklers Beach on Sunday 4th February starting at 1 p.m.

The newly formed St. Helens Game Fishing Club will hold its forst Rally Day on Sunday 28th January and members are keen to establish club records and possibly a few Tasmanian records this season. To date, no tuna have been boated despite many trips to sea.

This club is still seeking new members and enquiries may be made to President Neil Suter, Vice-President Bob Breen, or Secretary Bob Jackson.

SOME FACTS ABOUT SEAVEED

Holiday time finds us enjoying walks along the seashore and who can resist beachcombing and coming back with a handful of seaweed and shells. The most primitive of all plants are the Algae which live in water. These include the true seaweeds of salt and fresh water, pond scums, the little green patches that you see on moist—tree trunks, fence posts and flower pots and a number of tiny plants you can only see with a microscope. The Tiny Algae:

Among the most interesting of these are the diatoms. They have tiny, beautifully carved shells, made of two parts fitting together like a chocolate box and containing a very hard substance called silica.

Diatomare found in both salt and fresh water. When they die the shells fall to the bottom and build up beds of silica called diatomaceous earth. These beds may be as much as 3000ft deep. Diatomaceous earth is used for filtering bacteria and other impurities from liquids and also for filtering paint. Living diatoms are also important food for many animals living in the water. The Larger Algae:

The larger algae may reach considerable size but they have a very simple structure with no root, stem or leaves but a flat body called a thallus, sometimes attached by a holdfast. The algae take in food materials and air from the surrounding water over the whole surface of the thallus. The holdfast is only an anchor and does not take in food materials as true roots do.

Because they are surrounded by water the algae do not need supporting tissues such as the wood of trees.

The larger algae are divided into three groups according to the colour of the thallus. These are green, red and brown Algae and the colour of the thallus seems to determine the depth to which they can grow.

Green plants absorb light mainly from the red end of the spectrum, through the chlorophyll. Brown and red Algae contain in addition to chlorophyll a brown and red pigment which can absorb light rays other than those absorbed by the green colouring matter. The brown seaweeds can live further down than the greens and the reds further down than the browns. Most of the red seaweeds are divided into fernlike form in order to catch as much light as possible.

TOO MANY CALORIES SPOIL THE BABY

OBESITY, with all its dangers, is the major nutritional problem among adults in affluent countries. Moreover, the number of fatty cells in the body may be largely determined in early life, and certainly it is known that fat babies tend to become fat children (and they fat adults in turn). But babies are not born fat, they are made fat. A recent investigation in Sheffield has made this clear. The weights of 261 babies born in hospital there, were around the generally accepted norm at birth, but six weeks later there was a major shift towards being overweight, especially among the boys; and this was very much more apparent among the 240 artificially fed babies than among the 21 breastfed babies.

The doctor concerned says that overfeeding of artificially fed babies is encouraged by almost everyone connected with them and their mothers, and by the popular notion of the bonny baby with its 'bloated cheeks and limbs' and 'protruberant belly'. Moreover, present day mothers have a low resistance to the crying infant, and tend to provide it with instant calorific gratification and the recent vogue for the early introduction of non-milk feeds and for the giving of solids almost from birth doesn't help matters.

He points out too, that advice to deal with a restless fractious child by giving it a starchy, sugary preparation is very ill judged. Such a child may, in fact, be suffering the effects of feeds that are much too concentrated, the results of the present slap-happy aproach to the preparation of reconstituted feeds: It may really be an overstuffed infant with a great thirst! Yet another argument against early artificial feeding is provided in a recent letter. Children who received foods other than breast milk in the first month of life are three times as likely as children who were breast fed to show signs of allergy later in childhood. This is understandable, for an Artificially fed new born baby can drink his own weight of milk in a week and is thus lavishly exposed to milk protein and so likely to become allergic to it. An allergy to one substance probably makes more likely the development of an allergy to others - house dust and pollens in this case.

Perhaps in view of all this, the point might more forcibly be made to all young pregnant women not members of Women's Lib that the female breast, even through a see—through, does rather look as though it was designed with a baby in mind.

INCEDIARISM.

It is a shame to see the Fingal Valley once again coughing under a fall of smoke! The recent fire at Major's Gully just behind Mangana is the fiercest so far. It started up on Tuesday around midday and, fortuantely was spotted immediately from the lookout on Tower Hill. Nevertheless, by the time fire fighters got into action, the flames were so fierce that the men had to withdraw. We believe too that a forestry car was lost.

The most frightening thing about this latest blaze is that it was lit deliberately! No one has been arrested because nobody witnessed anyone in the area. These people are cumning enough not to be seen or to be well away when their incendiary sets the bush alight. Police and forestry officials find it hard to catch these criminals; this is understandable and also good reason for every decent person to report suspicious circumstances immediately.

At this moment residents of Mangana are in fear that the fire may travel over to Specimen Hill, which has not been burned off for a long time. If this happens, Mangana will be in grave danger. The fact that it was intentional gives one a very bitter taste in the mouth. Does this crime mean much to you?

Or would it mean more if loss of life was a result?

Don't wait for that tragedy - keep your eyes open and be ready to expose these criminals if you should chance to witness them!
